What is a Cookie?

A cookie is a small piece of data that a website requests from your browser, computer, or mobile device. The cookie enables the website to "remember" your actions or preferences over time. Most web browsers support cookies; however, users can configure their browsers to reject certain types of cookies or specific cookies. In addition, users can delete cookies at any time.

Types of Cookies

Cookies may be classified in terms of duration or domain name. When classified in terms of duration, cookies are classified as session cookies and persistent cookies. Session cookies refer to cookies that are deleted when the user closes the browser, whereas persistent cookies are cookies that remain on the user's computer / device for a predetermined period. When cookies are classified according to the domain to which they belong, they are divided into first-party cookies and third-party cookies. Cookies placed by the visited domain are called first-party cookies, while cookies placed by a different domain are called third-party cookies. If persons outside the visited domain place cookies on the user's device through the visited domain, these are third-party cookies.
